What are the reasons for the rising divorce rate? Even the experts can't agree. Some attribute it to the easier divorce laws now on the books in some states. Others point to the changing American attitude toward love and marriage -the so-called sexual revolution. Still others find a partial answer in the growing economic independence of women.

Whatever the reasons, for more and more children it means growing up in fatherless homes.

"Project Concern" is a logical extension of women's committee activities over the past years," Miss Walters concluded. "We have been involved in many phases of rural health because we believe that healthy Farm Bureau members are prosperous members. Through various media and through personal contact, this special project gives us the chance to make sure members are aware of health care benefits available to them,"

ACHS Students In Competition

On April 28th, two Appomattox County High School students, Bryan Selz (on the right) and Mike Gallier (on the left) took part in the J. W. Draper Award Competition at Hampden-Sydney. Approximately 70 high school juniors from many areas of the state participated in this examination.

John William Draper, professor of Chemistry and natural philosophy at Hampden-Sydney from 1836 to 1839, was one of the young nation's most active scientists. He discovered the first law of photochemistry, took the first portrait photograph and astronomical photograph, and began the first studies of photosynthesis. In continuing Draper's spirit of inquiry and devotion to excellence, Hampden-Sydney has established this competition in chemistry to honor Professor Draper and to recognize scientific achievement among the students of our region.

Following the examination the students attended a luncheon and were given a tour of the campus.

The award ceremony followed in which Bryan Selz was awarded a certificate for placing among the top ten in the competition.
